Mauritius

General info:

Mauritius is situated in the Indian Ocean, approximately 2400 kilometers off the South East Coast of Africa. The island, which is of volcanic origin, covers an area of 1,865 square kilometers or 720 square miles. Coral reefs surround most of the coast except the south. Mauritius is part of the Mascarene Islands; the Republic of Mauritius is off the coast of Africa in the Indian Ocean, 900 km east of Madagascar. The republic consists of five islands – St Brandon, Rodrigues, two Agalegas Islands and Mauritius itself. Mountains scattered throughout the island, tropical forests and plants are other features that add to the natural beauty of the island. With more than 90 miles of white sandy beaches and the transparent lagoon are protected from the open sea by the world's third largest coral reef which almost surrounds the island.

When to visit! Mauritius Climate

The average temperature is 27° centigrade during the day and rarely under 20° at night. There are two seasons, hot from November to April and warm from May to October.

History & Culture

The first Europeans to have visited Mauritius were the Portuguese at the beginning of the sixteenth century (most probably in 1510). The Dutch who settled in the island in 1598 named it Mauritius after Prince Maurice of Nassau. Dutch introduced sugar cane and the Java deer before leaving in 1710 where they had found in the mean time a far better settling place: The Cape of Good Hope in South Africa. About five years later, in 1715, the French occupied the island, renaming it "Isle de France".

It was under the French Governor, Mahé de Labourdonnais, that Mauritius knew its first development: a harbor was built. Port Louis, named after the ruling king Louis XV, became the capital of Mauritius. Trade on the island thrived; Mauritius could supply enough sugar and rum to the surrounding islands and visiting vessels.
